

Alfox Snowdancer

Alfox are at home in the north. Their thick white fur offers great protection from the elements, and their strength and intelligence put them at the top of the food chain. They are imposing figures with three spiraling horns atop their head. This feature they share with their distant relatives, the Inox. Like their cousins, the Alfox gather in clans, but these are split following one of two rival ideologies: the Snowspeakers, who believe the divine speaks to them through the falling snow; and the Icespeakers, who instead look to the ice growing up from the cold earth.

The most adept priests of the Snowspeakers are those that move with the winds and snow, using it to make others dance, as well—often against their will. It is a breathtakingly beautiful sight, watching these Snowdancers harness the raw power of their movement to bring forth the elements of the north. Their enemies soon find themselves sapped of all warmth as the wind beats them into a snowy grave.

Complexity: ●○○○○

Elemental Affinities: ❄️🌪️

Retirement: 107.3

2023 CEDRALOFAIR GAMES, LLC.
ALL RIGHTS RESERVED. USED WITH PERMISSION.

Vermling Trapper

A Vermling's small stature makes the cold climate of the north particularly inhospitable. But when forced to choose between the harsh elements and the constant harassment of human settlers in the south, some clans have decided to risk the snow and ice. Many have found homes near Frosthaven, mostly in the Radiant Forest, which is always unseasonably warm. Malevolent forces, however, have begun to push the Vermlings out of this forest as well, once again leaving them scrambling for survival.

A major part of survival is hunting for food and hides to keep warm, and Trappers have always been good at that, giving them a strong edge in the unforgiving wilds. They have grown quite adept at not only laying a variety of snares, but also luring their prey into the deadly traps. Quick on their feet and with jaws of metal never in short supply, Trappers are prepared to bring down any quarry.

Complexity: ●●●●○

Elemental Affinities: None

Retirement: 56.5

2023 CEPHALOFAIR GAMES, LLC.
ALL RIGHTS RESERVED. USED WITH PERMISSION.

Human Banner Spear

Northern human settlements existed long before emissaries from White Oak traveled to Frosthaven, looking for new ways to expand their Merchant's Guild. When these endeavors only led to angering the Algox population, the southerners fled, leaving the ill-prepared fishing village to face the blowback. But humans are a resilient people. Even on the brink of despair, there is hope for survival.

The only thing left behind by the Merchant's Guild were the Banner Spears, tireless warriors forever in search of respect and glory. Frosthaven has no need of pride, though. Cut off from the rest of the world and faced with the harsh realities of the north, Banner Spears are forced to reevaluate what truly matters. They were abandoned like everything else, and they must forge new, stronger bonds to stay alive.

Complexity: ●●○○○

Elemental Affinities: ●

Retirement: 50.2

2023 CEPHALOPAIR GAMES, LLC.
ALL RIGHTS RESERVED. USED WITH PERMISSION.

Quatryl Blinkblade

Quatryls typically don't like being underestimated. They are smaller than the other peoples they encounter, yes, but that doesn't mean they are worth any less. If anything, they will go out of their way to show they are worth more. Their scientific institutions on the eastern continent have developed a myriad of technological advancements—bionics and prosthetics used to enhance their own capabilities. There are even vague records that long ago, the Quatryls' scientific research led them to the north to hunt for its secrets, but these facilities have long since fallen to ruin.

The fact of the matter is that the cold is not a forgiving climate for one so small. If a Blinkblade were to travel north, it may be because they have nowhere else to go, or because there is some quarry to be found. Blinkblades are assassins, after all. Equipped with experimental temporal drives, they can alter the flow of time, moving faster than the eye can see and striking harder than a creature ten times their size. Such actions can only be performed in short bursts, however, and there is always a cost to such great power.

Complexity: ●●●●●

Elemental Affinities: None

Retirement: 60.2

2023 CEPHALOFAIR GAMES, LLC.
ALL RIGHTS RESERVED. USED WITH PERMISSION.

Aesther Boneshaper

Aesthers were once human, but a tragedy long ago caused them to lose their physical form, scattering it across the infinite planes. Those who willed their psyche back together found a world they no longer recognized, and so they left, traveling the planes in search of knowledge and hidden insights. Occasionally they return, driven by varied purposes and employing bewildering methods.

Aesthers draw energy from the planes, and the planes are full of useful and terrible things. Boneshapers are able to tap into the wells of life found in other planes and infuse them into living things on this one—or at least things that were once living. Invariably, some of the Boneshaper's own life force is transferred with it, and many go mad through the constant push and pull of life and death. Very few are capable of taming the wild energy and shaping it to their will.

Complexity: ●●●●○

Elemental Affinities: ●●

Melee

Ranged

Mobility

Support

Defense

Control

Retirement: 70.2

2023 CEPHALOFAIR GAMES, LLC.
ALL RIGHTS RESERVED. USED WITH PERMISSION.

2023 CEPHALOFAIR GAMES, LLC.
ALL RIGHTS RESERVED. USED WITH PERMISSION.

Lurker Crashing Tide

Lurkers, as they are called by those who dwell on the land, once reigned over a vast, underwater empire, but it fell to ruin when the source of their power—a coral crown—was destroyed and the shards scattered by the currents of the Misty Sea. The Lurkers search endlessly for the pieces of this crown, haunted by an overwhelming sense of loss. They are driven to reassemble the crown, even if they no longer understand why. The currents have brought these shards to the north, and, close to their source of power, the Lurkers have begun to grow in strength once again.

Like the ebb and flow of the Lurkers' power throughout history, so too do the tides shift. There is a cycle to all things, and this is particularly exemplified in the Crashing Tides, guardians and protectors of their society and the natural order of things. They build their power over time, and then use it to crash against their foes in a wave of destruction. The waves must recede, of course, but then power will grow once again.

Complexity: ●●●○○

Elemental Affinities: ☀️🌊

Retirement: 54.2

Valrath Deathwalker

No group is quite so ill-suited for the icy northern climates as the Valrath, who make their homes far to the south around the Red Desert. There was once a great war in that region between the Valraths and the humans, both equally interested in conquering the Stormbrew Plains for themselves. The two nations have since made peace, and the Valrath government in particular has made concerted efforts to forsake its aggressive past. In more recent times, they have focused on economic strength over the physical.

There is a saying among the Valrath: "In order to survive the ice, one must have an icy soul." This is apt for a Deathwalker, a nomad bent on atoning for the Valrath nation's past sins by ensuring the souls of the dead find rest. Wherever great tragedy falls, a Deathwalker is usually not far behind, and Frosthaven has seen plenty of tragedy.

Complexity: ●●●○○

Elemental Affinities: ☉

Retirement: 53.3

2023 CEPHALOFAIR GAMES, LLC.
ALL RIGHTS RESERVED. USED WITH PERMISSION.

Lurker Deepwraith

Lurkers, as they are called by those who dwell on the land, once reigned over a vast, underwater empire, but it fell to ruin when the source of their power—a coral crown—was destroyed and the shards scattered by the currents of the Misty Sea. The Lurkers search endlessly for the pieces of this crown, haunted by an overwhelming sense of loss. They are driven to reassemble the crown, even if they no longer understand why. The currents have brought these shards to the north, and, close to their source of power, the Lurkers have begun to grow in strength once again.

Beware the deep of the sea, where darkness and camouflage are used by Lurker hunters to stalk their victims. These Deepwraiths will use fear and confusion to break the will of their prey, such that they happily succumb to the embrace of death. There is nothing more terrifying in all the seas, and now they are leaving the dark of the ocean, scouring the north for shards of their crown. Their ability to kill silently and efficiently has only very slightly diminished in these new environments.

Complexity: ●●●○○

Elemental Affinities: ☉

Retirement: 99.3

2023 CEPHALOPAIR GAMES, LLC.
ALL RIGHTS RESERVED. USED WITH PERMISSION.

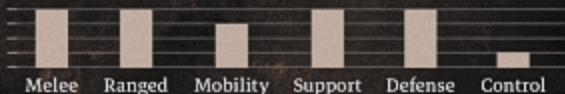

Inox Drifter

The Inox clans of the Great Grove value their strength and self-reliance, but they could not bury internal quarrels in time to repel the human empire's expansion into their lands. They paid dearly. Some Inox have retreated deeper into the most defensible areas of the forest. Others venture into other civilizations, employing their great size, woodcraft, and performative traditions in a variety of occupations.

In fact, it is common practice among many clans to send their young warriors off into the larger world for a year so they can find themselves and discover their passion. Some of them never return, lured away by city life or, in rarer cases, discovering that their passion is the wilderness itself. These Inox revel in surviving off the land without allegiance or responsibility. They are the Drifters, and there is no better place to test their skills than the north.

Complexity: ●○○○○

Elemental Affinities: None

Retirement: 48.3

2023 CEPHALOFAIR GAMES, LLC.
ALL RIGHTS RESERVED. USED WITH PERMISSION.

Algox Frozen Fist

Algox are at home in the north. Their thick white fur offers great protection from the elements, and their strength and intelligence put them at the top of the food chain. They are imposing figures with three spiraling horns atop their head. This feature they share with their distant relatives, the Inox. Like their cousins, the Algox gather in clans, but these are split following one of two rival ideologies: the Snowspeakers, who believe the divine speaks to them through the falling snow; and the Icespeakers, who instead look to the ice growing up from the cold earth.

The Frozen Fists are the elite fighters of the Icespeaker clans in their war with the Snowspeakers. They have devoted themselves to the divine strength of the ice and are able to encase their huge fists in layers of sharp frost to better pummel their enemies into bloody oblivion. Their communion with the frozen earth also gives them unnatural stamina, allowing them to sow ice and destruction across the battlefield long after most warriors would have given up.

Complexity: ●●○○○

Elemental Affinities: ❄️🌊

Retirement: 120.3

2023 CEPHALOFAIR GAMES, LLC.
ALL RIGHTS RESERVED. USED WITH PERMISSION.

Harrower Geminete

A Harrower is not one single life form but, rather, a swarm of thousands of insects gathered to form a hive mind intelligence. Their existence, in fact, predates all other sentient life, going back to the volatile early ages of the world. They have always maintained their distance from the operations of humans and other species, concerning themselves with their own disparate machinations. When Harrowers do interact with others, they shape their swarms into a form vaguely similar to the other party, so as to minimize their discomfort.

Not all Harrowers, however, act as a single unit. Rarely, a swarm develops in such a way that they cannot come to a single mind. Instead, they settle into a stable equilibrium of two wills, which compete to exert influence over their collective form. The Geminete, as the phenomenon is called, will work in harmony to shift between two wildly different configurations, each with their own abilities and desires.

Complexity: ●●●●●

Elemental Affinities: 🔥 ❄️ ⚡

Melee

Ranged

Mobility

Support

Defense

Control

Retirement: 160.3

2023 CEPHALOFAIR GAMES, LLC.
ALL RIGHTS RESERVED. USED WITH PERMISSION.

Unfettered HIVE

Living machines come from an era long past. Built to serve a variety of functions, then cast into dormancy during a great cataclysm, the automatons once again are waking up and spreading their influence across the north. They call themselves "Unfettered"; no longer bound by their original programming, they are now free to follow their own will.

Not all of the ancient machines were able to fold into the Unfettered cause, however. One example is the Harrower Imitative Voltaic Entity, or HIVE, an experimental model designed to mimic the swarm-like structure of a Harrower. The HIVE employs a unique processing structure that is distributed among the many different smaller automatons that make up its larger form. This structure gives it a much higher capacity for independent thought, and so, once awoken, it decided to set off on its own journey.

Complexity: ●●●●●

Elemental Affinities: None

Melee

Ranged

Mobility

Support

Defense

Control

Retirement: 148.2

2023 CEPHALOPAIR GAMES, LLC.
ALL RIGHTS RESERVED. USED WITH PERMISSION.

Orchid Infuser

Orchids come from across the Misty Sea and can spend years in a peaceful state, contemplating and planning their next move while crystals grow across their skin. Orchids are largely unaffected by their environment, getting whatever warmth and sustenance they need from their meditations, so it is perfectly natural they would eventually find their way into the inhospitable north. These harsher climates provide them with new, unique perspectives on which to ruminate.

An Orchid's contemplative nature also gives them a particular prowess over the elemental energies of the world. Some use these energies to attack their foes with raw power; however, others emit these energies into strands of elemental fabric, weaving them into physical armor and weapons. These are the Infusers, martial warriors who use the natural flow of elements to enhance their already formidable fighting skills.

Complexity: ●●●○○

Elemental Affinities: ☾ ☿ ☼

Retirement: 92.2

2023 CEPHALOFAIR GAMES, LLC.
ALL RIGHTS RESERVED. USED WITH PERMISSION.

Unfettered Metal Mosaic

Living machines come from an era long past. Built to serve a variety of functions, then cast into dormancy during a great cataclysm, the automatons once again are waking up and spreading their influence across the north. They call themselves "Unfettered"; no longer bound by their original programming, they are now free to follow their own will.

Over time, old pieces of these machines, some more functional than others, were scattered across the continent. A collection of operational ancient technology was found and assembled into an impressive, albeit disjointed, fighting machine. Though it shares the same origin as the Unfettered, it does not seem to share their cause. It is happy to once again be alive and desires to help its creators protect the outpost of Frosthaven.

Complexity: ●●●●○

Elemental Affinities: 🔥 ❄️

Retirement: 103.4

2023 CEPHALOPAI GAMES, LLC.
ALL RIGHTS RESERVED. USED WITH PERMISSION.

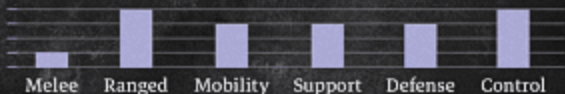

Aesther Pain Conduit

Aesthers were once human, but a tragedy long ago caused them to lose their physical form, scattering it across the infinite planes. Those who willed their psyche back together found a world they no longer recognized, and so they left, traveling the planes in search of knowledge and hidden insights. Occasionally they return, driven by varied purposes and employing bewildering methods.

The calamity that caused the Aesthers' condition was a persistent presence on this plane for much of recorded history. It captured and tortured any who fought against it, and its prisoners—those who survived—were only released after it was destroyed. The Pain Conduits suffered worst, so infused with torment that they developed a unique ability to control pain itself. They can visit great horrors upon their foes, but they do not do so lightly. Only those who inflict harm and evil intent on others will find that same harm visited back upon themselves.

Complexity: ●●●○○

Elemental Affinities: 🔥🌊

Retirement: 179.6

2023 CEPHALOPAI GAMES, LLC.
ALL RIGHTS RESERVED. USED WITH PERMISSION.

Savvas Pyroclast

The Savvas live deep under the Copperneck Mountains, largely removed from the turmoil of the surface. There, they protect their source of life, which imbues unliving rock with consciousness and thought. The Savvas have few needs, and so, most are driven to seek domination over the elements, controlling and using wind, earth, ice, and fire. Those who are able to master the elements are held in the highest regard.

Savvas go to extreme lengths to exert their power over the elements. Some cast themselves into active volcanoes, where they are either destroyed or become one with the raw power of the magma, emerging as a Pyroclast—a living embodiment of the chaotic and destructive force of flowing lava. No one can question their power then.

Complexity: ●●●○○

Elemental Affinities: 🔥🌿

Retirement: 51.3

2023 CEPHALOFAIR GAMES, LLC.
ALL RIGHTS RESERVED. USED WITH PERMISSION.

Savvas Shattersong

The Savvas live deep under the Copperneck Mountains, largely removed from the turmoil of the surface. There, they protect their source of life, which imbues unliving rock with consciousness and thought. The Savvas have few needs, and so, most are driven to seek domination over the elements, controlling and using wind, earth, ice, and fire. Those who are able to master the elements are held in the highest regard.

While the Savvas consider themselves above the squabbles of the surface world, the Shattersongs have risen above even the petty grasping at power exhibited by the normal Savvas. The Shattersong are composed of pure quartz, the result of strict diet and meditation. A Shattersong concerns itself with only one thing: tapping into the power behind their source of life and deciphering its will. Such pursuits have not left them defenseless, however, as they are also attuned to the world around them and can send out destructive vibrational energy.

Complexity: ●●●○○

Elemental Affinities:

Retirement: 132.1

2023 CEPHALOPIN GAMES, LLC.
ALL RIGHTS RESERVED. USED WITH PERMISSION.